“HIGH SOCIETY IS A WONDERFUL COMMUNITY, VIBRANTLY CREATED AND RICHLY CONNECTED.”

David Sutherland

“ A TRULY FIRST-CLASS PROPERTY TO RIVAL ANYTHING, ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD.”

Nick Georgalis

In conversation with David Sutherland, Director of Planning and Design, Fender Katsalidis Architects

ARCHITECTURALLY, WHAT MAKES HIGH SOCIETY SO IMPRESSIVE?

In years to come I think people will look back and recognise High Society, and the Republic precinct as a whole, as one of Canberra’s most important residential projects of the early 21st Century. While the first thing people will always notice about High Society is the stunning tower stretching more than 113 metres up into the Belconnen skyline, I believe it’s actually what lies beneath it that really sets it apart from a design perspective.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY THAT?

From the very beginning none of us, and that included Nick Georgalis and his team at Geocon, were interested in building a run-of-the-mill residential tower. What we were all excited about was the opportunity to create a vibrant, richly connected modern community in an urban setting in the centre of Belconnen. A place that elegantly and seamlessly links the professional, family and social lives of those who call it home, day and night.

HOW DID YOU ACHIEVE THAT?

High Society is built atop a rich mix of public and private spaces, with activities curated to bring people together, day and night. Residents can dip in and out of these spaces at their leisure, seven days a week, simply by catching an elevator from their front door. With the mix of bars, cafés, restaurants, retail stores and commercial suites creating an ever changing environment, it’s a thriving modern community. A place of luxury, certainly, but also a really wonderful place to be.

WHAT WAS THE DESIGN INSPIRATION BEHIND HIGH SOCIETY?

Boasting the tallest residential tower ever built in Canberra, rising 113 metres above Lake Ginninderra, High Society was always going to be the glittering jewel in the $1 billion Republic crown – one of the largest and highest profile projects of its kind in Australia.

With this in mind the design vision was very simple – everything we did from visual aesthetics and interior appointments to lifestyle amenity had to ensure High Society was a truly first-class property to rival anything, anywhere in the world. Have we achieved that? I believe resoundingly, yes we have.

WHAT EXCITES YOU MOST ABOUT HIGH SOCIETY?

Lots of things excite me. From the concierge services, to the r-braze-controlled cedar where residents can store their personal wine collections, to the private cinema, chef’s kitchen and executive dining room for exclusive use by owners. High Society is like nothing Canberra has ever seen before.

The whole precinct really is unprecedented, with a vibrant energy that’s going to be very, very unique – delivering a luxury lifestyle in the heart of Canberra’s most vibrant town centre.

THE OBSERVATION DECK IS STUNNING. WHO WILL BE ABLE TO ACCESS IT?

Everyone! It’s located at the highest point of the tower, 27 storeys up, and offers sweeping views over the local district and beyond. It will be open to High Society residents of course, but also the public. There will be a range of premium hospitality facilities too; making the observation deck the perfect place to bring family and friends, colleagues and clients, or simply share sundowner drinks at the end of the day.
